

ABSTRACT

This invention relates illustratively to a digital still camera. The inventive device is arranged to accept a first managing criterion regarding the number of pictures to be taken or the recording time for recording them on a piece of media, and a second managing criterion corresponding to an integral multiple of the recording size determined by the first managing criterion, the two criteria being used to manage the recording of data to the media with ease.